LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

"IN SILK ATTIRE."

To the Editor of The Tribune. SIR: In your paper of Saturday last there appeared an article headed "In Silk Attire," which, it seemed to me, was likely to prove to the Greeks a stumbling-block and to the Jews foolishness. The writer of that article reproved the women who appear upon the platforms of lecture-rooms and Equal Rights Associations for the extreme brilliancy and richness of their costumes. His remarks are excellent as regards sense, but somewhat inconsistent as emanating from a member of the press. Never having had the plory and honor myself of appearing upon any platform, political or otherwise, and cherishing in my heart of hearts a sublime indifference to the bailot, you will perceive that I am quite disinterested in rushing to the defense of these ladies, who bave been unjustly attacked. I say unjustly, because ever since women have adventured upon a platform the public press of America has seen fit to occupy itself with their dress. Their silks have been seemingly a more important subject than their sentiments, and their train of thought inferior in consequence to the train of their gowns. "Mrs. So-and-so, attired in "-a long description from the last Journal des Modes-precedes any account of what the lady in question had to say, and is evidently considered as the chief point of the notice. And only last Spring, when the Equal Rights Convention met in New-York, and when the ladies who occupied the platform, with one or two exceptions, dressed with the greatest simplicity, a howl of anguish and reproach went up from the universal Jenkins, who evidently considered himself defrauded of his rights. rvidently considered himself defrauded of his rights. Poor fellow! he had nothing to describe, and took his revenge by abusing the ladies, right and left, for the shabiness of their black silks, and the dreary plainness of their attire. So much was said, indeed, upon the subject, that the women really became alarmed, and took to dressing vigorously in self-defense. No sooner, however, do they reach a point of elegance, a superfluity of adornment, upon which the gentlemen of the press can exhaust their whole vocabulary of modiste phrases, and all the complimentary adjectives in their dictionaries, than these means is the representations. the complimentary adjectives in their dictionaries, than these inconsistent ceneors reprove them for their vanity and extravagance! What are the poor creatures to do! Certainly the whole system is wrong, and the fact that a woman feels that she has something to say to the word, and comes modestly forward to say it, gives Tom, Dick, and Harry no real warrant to go into vulgar details about her dress, any more than about her person. If her speech or her lecture is full of beauty and truth, it is no more, nor less, beautiful and true whether delivered in silk or serge, and, if worthless in itself, all the satins and velvets of Paris and New-York cannot save it. Then let us have a truce, gentlemen, upon this everlasting question of frees, or if your soils are aching with their pentiup millinery poems, relieve them in the most gushing of fashion articles, und damit punktum, as our German friends say

HAVE BLACK MEN ANY RIGHTS THAT RAILROAD

CONDUCTORS ARE BOUND TO RESPECT ! To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: On Saturday evening, the 30th ult., I bought a ticket over the New-Jersey Raffroad for Washington, intending to ave on the 9:30 p.m. train. I sought, as I have repeatedly one without objection, a seat in the car with reserved seats, paying extra therefor; I entered the firstear of the kind, and was told the seats were all Mr. Wallack was called out at the end of the comedy, when taken. I then inquired of the man if there was another car of the kind; he replied: "Ahead." Going into the text car, one willin which the seats were also reserved, and which was not half full, the conductor or person in charge theref, in a most rude and boisterous manner, ordered me out. I stated my wish mildly (you must bear in mind that it is an all-night ride, that these weats are made to recline, and are intended for the comfort of such passengers as are willing to pay for them); he would not listen to me, but again ordered me out, and finally took hold of me to forcibly eject me.

I feit myself able to level the ruffian to the floor, both of whom by force, which I did not deem it product fact. I am confident that the only real reason for this lived ment and ejection, was my color. I could find no one who would interiore in my behalf, and as the car was about to start I had to pocket the indignity and proceed on my journey. I owe it to justice to make this statement, remarking that the day has gone by when Railroad Companies or other Corporations can thus, through their agents, unnecessarily and brutally injure the feelings of a man, troperly demeaning himself, decently clad, and who is willing to pay his fare, simply because of his color; for he has not only a growing moral sentiment at his back, but the ballot in his hand, and he will not yield.

The defendant field two pleas—enets the general issue, and a special piez. To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: I find the above report in The Tribune. It is what is known as a "legal fiction." The suit referred to is brought to recover 45 bonds of $1,000 cach, lodged with my firm of T. B. Coddinaton & Co., in 1859, by the Minnesota and Pacific Railroad Company, as security on a contract for the purchase of railroad from. The plaintiff in this suit claims to have acquired title to the bonds in some way from the Railroad Company after they had been so pledeed, and while they were in the hands of my firm, and has sued for them on the ground that the President of the Company exceeded his authority in making the contract. When he demanded the bonds my right to hold them had been substantiated in a suit brought by my firm against the Minnesota and Pacific Railroad Company.

ITALIAN OPERA-MISS KELLOGO'S REAPPEAR-ANCE.

The opera season which began so well last Wednesday continues to prosper, and we are not without a screen and happy confidence that it will flow on to the end without any of the disasters which seem to be the natural concomitants of lyrical ventures in New-York. Close upon the heels of the new tenor, Miss Kellogg trips upon the stage, and all the town pours forth to bid her welcome. She made her rentrée last Friday in Lindaone of the most charming and suitable of her roles-and showed, to our way of thinking, a very marked improvement both in action and singing over her performances in the early part of last season. She sings now with greater simplicity, greater care, and greater regard for dramatic requirements, and her manner on the stage is just as delightful and lady-like as it used to be in old times before she went to Europe. She received a friendly welcome on Friday, and the substantial compliment of an overflowing house, although the audience was rather colder than it ought to have been considering the quality of the entertainment. Ron conl in his great tragic part was at his very best. Habelmann as the Viscount was provokingly unimpassioned and did not sing very well either.

Last night Grassine was presented before another very good audience and a much more demonstrative one than that of the previous night. Here again Miss Kellogg appears to especial advantage, for she is sprightly and girlish, she looks very pretty both in her peasant dress and her grande tenue, and she sings the music sweetly. Ronconi, of course, was Crispino-more exuberant than ever, and valuable, as he always is, not only for the excellence of his own performance, but for the spirit which he infused into all around him. The whole representation, thanks to the soprano and the buffo, was lively and pleasant, although none of the other parts, taken by Reyna, Barili, Reichardt, &c., was well done in itself. But with two such good artists in the leading roles, it is easy to make Crispino pass off well.

-The Tropatore is to be repeated to-morrow night, with the same cast which has carried it triumphantly already through an evening and an afternoon This, we are assured, will be positively the last repetition of the great high C feat,-at least until we have it again

THE DRAMA.

MR. WALLACK'S FIRST NIGHT.

"Home" was a perfect success, last night, at Wallack's Theater. The performance had been but a short time in progress, when that soft ripple of gentle laughter ran over the house-that pleased mormur and purr of satisfaction-which so certainly denotes the approving mood of an andience that is in complete sympathy with a play. And "Home" is a comedy which deserves sympathy. It tells a good story in a direct manner. Its movement is rapid. Its characters are distinct. Its style is as smooth and as bright as silver Neatness of construction has been carried to the extreme of finish in this comedy. The work is comprised in three acts. Only one scene is set. Only seven persons are introduced. The scene is an apartment in the residence of an English country gentleman. The story shows how that gentleman's son, absent for many years in America, returned home, wearing an assumed name, to find his old father—then a widower—on the point of being entrapped into a marriage with a fortune-hunting young woman, and to save that father from this misfortune. The story is simplicity itself. The manner in which it is told is equally simple. But Mr. Robertson's felicity consists in his great talent for making simple agents effective, and in his handling of dialogue. The latter is peculiarly shown in the second act, in two conversa tions-the one between Colonel While, (played Mr. Lester Wallack, and played superbly), and Dora Thornhaugh, whom he loves, and he other between the Colonel and Mrs. Pinchbeck, whom he pretends to love. Hesitancy is the essence of the former, and glibness is the essence of the latter. The analysis of real passion and of mock passion is excerient in both these scenes-because truthful as to fact and extremely clever as to expression. At the end of the piece there is another and a notable fine touch of nature, in the dramatist's presentment of Mrs. Pinchbeck's assertion of her better self. Miss Henriques, who acted charmingly all through, gave this outburst with singular dignity and feeling, and so moved the audience that she was recalled after her final exit. Mr. Gilbert, who enacted the old father, Mr. Dorrison, gave a perfect embodiment of courtly grace, dignity of character, no less than manners, and noble manliness of feeling. Mr. Stoddart contributed a good deal of mirth to the representation by his capital performance of the knavish Captain Mountraffe. Mr. Ringgold assumed the little part of Bertie, and, with Miss Germon as Lucy Dorrison for his idol, painted the sincerity, sweetness, and silliness of boy-love in a simple and very pleasing way. Dora-who is just a sweet woman, with no marked o dramatic attributes of character-was piquantly played by Mrs. Laura Le Clair Phillips. For the manner in which the comedy was represented the most exacting critic could find none but words of praise. The set was elaborate and handsome. The tableaus that were offered, alike when the curtain fell and in the judicious modifications of them presented when it rose again-which it did after each act-in response to the public call, were really striking pictures. fine in detail, and significant in substance. The incidental music, partienlarly at the end, had a touching effect. Mr. Wallack acted with his usual vigor and his usual attention to detail. It seems needless to say that he never misses a point, when one is to be made, and—better than that that his performance is even, smooth, full of bright intelligence, and as crisp as the icicles that sparkle on the eafless trees in the beautiful moonlit nights of Winter.

so an unusually pleasant evening ended in a hearty out-Hartz, the Magician, has broken his Prospero staff, drowned his book, and left the necromancer's calling. He will shortly open a store on Broadway for the sale of magical apparatus, conjurer's tools, and novelties of all sorts.

he made a brief speech of thanks. "A Regular Fix" followed. How exceedingly comical the farce is, we surely need not say-although the piece is not so well known here as it should be. Mr. Wallack, as Hugh de

Brass, entered fully into the spirit of its broad fun; and Casey's black gelding Dan, for $500, mile heats, best three in five, Dan going in harness, and Village Girl to wagon. The latter was the favorite at two to one before the start, and she won easily in three straight heats. Time—2:451, 2:461, 2:451.

The second race was a match for $1,000, between J. Murphy's chestnut mare Louise and J. Doty's bay mare Topsy; mile heats, best three in five, in harness. Louise was the favorite at $100 to $50 before the race, and at $100 to $25 after she had won the first heat in 2:31, 8le won the second heat in 2:401, after doing considerable running, as indeed she had done in the previous heat. So confident were her backers that they freely offered $100 to $55 that she won the race, without finding any takers. In the third heat Louise seemed to go all to pieces, breaking repeatedly and running considerably, so that the judges awarded the heat to Topsy; time, 2:372. She behaved equally bad in the fourth and fifth heats, and Topsy beat hear, thus winning the race. Time—2:464, 2:402. W. Lovell's roan mare Village Girl, by Sarsaparilla, out

THE PAINE-TAYLOR PIGEON-SHOOTING

MATCH. The pigeon-shooting match between Ira A. Paine of this city and John Taylor of Jersey City, and the recognized champion of the United States, took place yesterday, at the Du Bois track. One-hundred-and-fortyrecognized champion of the United States, took place yesterday, at the Du Bois track, One-hundred-and-forty-cighth-st, and Eighth-ave. It was two hours after the appointed time (noon) before the firing commenced, a delay which caused the shooting to be carried into darkness, and prevented a completion of the match. The high wind which prevailed interfered with the shooting, and quickened the birds, making them so swift on the wing that they carried themselves without the boundary unless shot over the traps. The firing was with the wind, at 21 yards, ground traps. Taylor won the toss, and fired first, killing his bird; the men then shot alternately throughout. Taylor was two ahead on the first ten birds, Pane-having missed his second and fourth birds; at 20 the champion was but one in advance; the same when the trap was sprung for the 30th, 40th, and 36th birds, though each had missed four birds; at 50 Faine was two ahead, the first time he had obtained the lead; at 50 Paine was three above Taylor, and maintained this lead as he fired at the 90th bird. It was fast darkening when this point was reached, but it was believed light would last until the match was settled if the men worked quickly. Taylor missed the 22d bird, putting him four behind, and virtually settling the "race." Paine shot straight away, killing at every fire. The birds were now slow to rise and difficult to see from this time out, and much delay was occasioned in making them take wing. The 26th bird for Taylor would not rise all that could be done, so Taylor went over to him, started him and then shot him; this was "no bird," yet some bickering followed about it. Taylor fired again and killed his bird. It was new too dark to see anything but a white feathered bird, and when Paine was cailed on, and his traps pulled no bird could be seen. There was a dark one there but it escaped. Had Paine killed him it would have ended the match. The referee decided to go on, Taylor's friends being anxious that the affair be shot through, now that they had a c color of the birds to be trapped; a white one was trapped and killed by Taylor, and Paine's side wanted the same for their man. While the judges were wrangling over this matter the referee called "game," and decided that the remainder of the birds be shot to-day at 10 o'clock. To this decision Taylor demirred, declaring that the referee, having once decided that the "race" should go on, could not now after his vertilet. He stated that he would not be on hand to-day, but would claim the stake money as the score stood. The following is the full score:

to an open field, there to sit two or three hours in the sold wind. The contest was the third and final one of the series, and to the victors the title of champion be longs. It was 2:30 when time was called, the Atlantics at the bat. At once it was evident that poor fielding must mark the game, the rough wind plaching the cheeks and swelling the hands of the players. Pearce secured his base fairly, and was enabled to reach home on passed balls before the second striker made a hit. Although the second and third batsmen in order retired, before the last hand was lost two more runs had been added to the score, and these through bad handling of the ball. Long, heavy hitting was out of the question, for the strong gale swept straight in the striker's face; because of this the score of the full game is small. When the day and the play are considered, there is everything to commend in the latter, and scarcely an error was made which could not be forgiven. Pinkham pitched for the Eckfords, and was somewhat wild in his delivery. There were many showy catches, and some very swift and securate throwing on both sides, the latter being chiefly effective. At the conclusion of the game, the Eckfords expressed no sorrow at their loss, nor were the other side over-enthusiastic at their victory. A full score of the play follows, showing outs, runs, first base on hits, total bases, times each man assisted in retiring hands, and number of hands each player put out:

THE NEW-YORK GOLD EXCHANGE BANK. The solvency of this institution has now been established, having paid its indebtedness in full; and its condition (as published) shows a very respectable capital with which to resume business. It is true that the Bank has lost heavily from the consequences of the recent panie; but it is also true that it has borne safely through many honest men who were victims of the notorious 'Gold Ring," and who, had it not been for its surplus and a portion of its capital, which was freely appropriated by the stockholders, would have been irreparably ruined and driven from business. The emergency which Mr. C. N. Jordan, the Receiver, was called upon to meet, was one of the most trying and difficult ever known in the history of Wall-st., and one of which the most experienced financiers not actually present could not form the most remote conception. What with the anxiety of the bewildered and terror-stricken "street," the confusion of that memorable Friday, and the immense mass of papers involved, there appeared a work to be done in which it was next to impossible to decide where to begin in order to tell how the Bank, the Clearing House, or the customers stood. People stood amazed; all business was at an end, and the stoutest hearts were stunned. But, under the management of a judicious head, what seemed to be a hopeless muddle has been made clear, and, as far as possible, satisfactory to all concerned. For this, not only the stockholders of the Bank and the "Street" generally, but the whole community, owe credit to Receiver Jordan, who, in one month immediately succeeding the panic, has reduced affairs to order, has relieved the fears of many who be lieved themselves ruined, has paid the debts of the bank and satisfied its customers, and now has turned the institution over to its owners. Subject to a thousand annoyances by the unreasonable, though perhaps to some de gree excusable, demands of excited men, he has decided every question in a spirit of liberality, doing justice to all, while especially favoring those in distress. It is sincerely to be hoped that neither this nor any other bank will hereafter get into such trouble as that which has just been experienced.

> THE EAPTISTS AND THE CITY MISSIONS. The members of the Baptist Sunday-School Union met last evening, is the Chapel of the First Baptist Church, between Thirty-ninth and Fortieth-sts. Their President, Mr. G. W. Hillman, said that the meeting was called to discuss the resolution, "That the Baptist Sunday-School Union is the true medium through which to convey charities intended for the city missions." Mr. to convey charities intended for the city missions." Mr. Yeaman of the Central Baptist Church being introduced, said that he was a thorough-going Baptist, and as such believed that the Baptist denomination in this city abould not give a cent of its money to help any other sect in missionary work, and that they therefore should withdraw their support from the general mission work and concentrate their efforts in building up their own churches. Mr. Yeaman was followed by the Rev. Mr. Looms of Antioch Church, who said that he agreed with what Mr. Yeaman said, and that the reason the Catholic Church were gaining the entire control of the city was because they did not divide their contributions with their Protestant brethren. The Baptist denomination was irrevocably divorced from all other evangelical churches, and why should they join with these churches in mission work! Mr. Stephens of the Fifty-third-st. Baptist Church then spoke very strongly in favor of cutting the Baptist mission work away from the general Union. He was followed by the Rev. Mr. Rhodes of the Canton-st. Church, who said that he was very sorry these had been any sectarian feeling: they should remember that the Baptist Church contributed very little toward the American Sunday-School Mission, and that even then the City Mission folks gave the Baptists a very good proportion of the teachers. And moreover, the American Sunday-School Union had often helped the Baptist Mission in its hour of difficulty. He believed that they should not withdraw their support from the American Mission miless they could see some better means of contributing their mission money. Mr. Samuel T. Hillman spoke very encouragingly converning the prospects of the Baptist Missions. The meeting was dismissed with the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Yeaman. Yeaman of the Central Baptist Church being introduced,

THE LATE ERIE STRIKE.

It seems that whatever even remotely affects the interests of Fisk takes to itself a high coloring. The strike which occurred Saturday and continued through yesterday in no way interferes with the progress or prosecution of business in Eric's marble halls. Fisk is not at all agitated, and says that his advertisement for brakemen in yesterday's paper brought him hundreds of applicants. and as there is nothing further than a knowledge of the signals, and the possession of moderate brawn, necessary to constitute a good brakesman, he apprehends no delay or difficulty in equipping every train with the regular number. The officers of the Eric Railroad say the strike is not justified by any reason whatever. The waces are liberal, and the work by no means exacting. Superintendent Rucker was dispatched to Port Jervis early yesterday morning, and was empowered to make such disposition of the men who were under his control as he deemed proper. The trains were running regularly all day, and everything was quick at Port Jervis, thereby belying the sensational reports of an espected collision and bloody work, which were published in certain papers yesterday? Mr. Fisk did not express himself positively in reference to the reinstatement of the three brakemen who have been dismissed, but indicated a course of action toward them which would be suggested by his judgment, and not influenced by the threats of his employés. Last evening Mr. Fisk was at his office until 25 o'clock, awaiting intelligence from Port Jervis, but recoived none of an unjusual nature. Jay Gould has said that the company intend to run the road; that the employée shall know their place, and that no concessions shall be made. Indeed, yesterday, instead of making overtures for a settlement, twenty old hands were discharged, and their places filled by green hands. And as there is nothing further than a knowledge of the

THE WORKINGWOMEN'S PROTECTIVE UNION. The annual meeting of the stockholders of this association was held yesterday afternoon in their new building, No. 48 Eleecker-st. Mr. William H. H. Moore occupied the chair during the absence of Judge Daly, the President. The election of officers for the enming year resulted in the choice of John D. Wolfe as President; J. W. Gerard, Vice-President; William B. President; J. W. Gerard, Vice-President; William B. Croaby, Secretary; Moses S. Beach, Treasurer; Judge Daiy, Henry A. Cram, Dr. D. D. St. J. Rosa, G. H. The report of the Superintendent, Mrs. Ferrere, shows that during the year just closed, the Association received 14,756 applications for employment; 2,72 women and girls were furnished with places; 1,117 employers applied for help, calling for from 1 to 20 porsons, as circumstances demanded; 300 complaints were received from workingwomen, whom employers had attempted to defraud; 300 ciarms, amounting to 31,435 were collected, of which 75 only were brought into cours, tue 70st 14 yr were brought into cours, tue 70st 14 yr were brought. Capt. Helme and his officers, and from early in the evening until midnight the house was thronged with ladies and gentlemen residing in the upper part of fixed in the superior of the superior of the city. Among the more prominent visitors were Police Commissioner M. T. Bronnan and family, the Hon. Win. Hitchman, School Commissioner Jackson and wife, Inspector Dilks and family, Inspector Walling, Capts. Davis, Wilson, McDermott, Pekson, Copeland, and Bogart, and a large number of sergeants and officers from other precents. Police Commissioners Boswarth and Manierro were present for a few moments in the carly part of the evoning. There was damping in one of applicants, 1,235 had never before registered on the books applicants, 1,238 had never before registered on the books of the Association; 281 were widows; 53, soldiers wives: 165 had husbands living; 297 were orphan girls; 247, half-orphans; 252, girls with parents, and 66 homeless girls. The report is much mere favorable than that of last year, and shows that new interest in the welfare of the workingwomen of the city has been awakened. A vote of thanks was tendered to John H. Parsons, esq., the counsel of the Association, for his valuable services during the past year. This gentleman devotes one day in each week to hearing complaints recorded at the rooms of the Association; and, when legal measures are found necessary to bring dishonest employers to terms, he invokes the law on behalf of his oppressed clients, charging nothing for his time and labor. The building new occupied by the Association was purchased by Moses Y. Beach, and is to be paid for in installments. The Association is greatly Association was purchased by Moses Y, Beach, and is to be paid for in installments. The Association is greatly in need of money. On the evening of the 3rth inst. John B. Goagh will deliver his lecture on "Peculiar People," at Cooper Institute for the benefit of the Association.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL DISPENSARY. The first annual meeting of the members of the Central Dispensary took place last night at No. 794 Eighth-ave, near Fifty-fifth-at., Vice-President Edward V. Fargis in the chair. The first annual report of the Home Surgeon, S. A. Raborg, was read, showing that during the year 1808 5,243 patients had been treated at during the year 1806 8.243 patients had been treated at the Dispensary, and 1.030 prescriptions dispensed. Of the number treated 1.256 were males and 1.947 females. In concluding the report the Doctor stated that the demand upon the Dispensary was great, that more room was desired, and suggested that the Committee on Building have power to solicit subscriptions for the purpose of enlarging the building, and to invite the residents of the district to inquire into the workings of the institution. The report of the visiting physician, Dr. C. C. Lee, was then read, stating that during the year, 1839, there were 544 patients treated at home, of which 223 were males, and 321 females; adulit patients, 312 under 12 years of age, 232; total visits paid, 1.245; cured or relieved. 630; died, 28; transferred to Dispensary or Hospital, 54; remaining under treatment, 18. The Secretary read a communication from Senator Sprague, stating that in obedience to a request of the members of the bissensary he will lecture for the benefit of the institution on "The People of the United States in Contrast with the People of Nations in Competition with them." Officers for the ensaining year were then elected, as follows; President, V. K. Stevenson; Vice-Presidents, B. P. Farreinid, and E. P. Fargis, Treasurer, James P. Travers. Secretary, S. A. THE MORRIS AND ESSEX RAILROAD ACCIDENT. On Saturday afternoon an accident occurred on the Morris and Essex Railroad at Chatham, N. J., which resulted in the injury of two brakemen and a heavy loss to the Company. A freight train from the west was rounding a curve when the engineer discovered that a train of empty coal cars was off the track about 100 yards ahead. The train was coming down a slight 100 yards ahead. The train was coming down a slight grade at a high rate of speed, and although the engineer gave instant warning, the motion could not be checked in time to prevent a collision. Five or six coal cars were destroyed and the locomotive of the freight train was badly damaged. John Ness and Benjamin Gibbs, two brakemen on the freight train, were injured. Ness had his nose broken and received other slight contusions. Gibbs was injured internally and he is not expected to survive. These statements were not learned at the depot in Hoboken, where inquiries were made, but upon the authority of one of the witnesses of the smash up.
